Baghdad – WAA

The Iraqi Journalists Syndicate commended today the position of Prime Minister Mohammed Shiaa Al-Sudani toward elderly journalists.

The Syndicate said in a statement that it received the decision with thanks and appreciation, and expressed its gratitude to Prime Minister Mohammed Shiaa Al-Sudani and the members of the Council of Ministers for their position in allocating five billion dinars in grants to cover the treatment of Iraqi journalists who are elderly and veterans, support social solidarity, and treat the families of martyred journalists.

It added, "The Syndicate also appreciates this humanitarian decision by the Prime Minister and the members of the Council of Ministers and their keenness to support journalists and their families in humanitarian cases, in appreciation of their efforts and their distinguished role in building the state and presenting a positive image of Iraq and the development and progress taking place in all fields to public opinion."

It affirmed that "journalists, owners of the honorable word, and advocates of freedom will continue to give and contribute, as they have always done, to enhancing Iraq's standing, serving its people, and supporting the government's efforts in the fields of services and the extensive reconstruction campaign currently witnessed by Iraq."
